Database System Design

The primary objective of this course is to introduce the techniques for database design in relational database systems. Topics covered in this course include data modeling, logical database design, database normalization, physical database design, database application development, database tuning, data warehousing, OLAP, data mining, and data-intensive web applications, etc.